

What happens if I or my loved one develops signs or symptoms of Covid-19?

If a resident exhibits signs and symptoms consistent with Covid-19, the resident's physician will be contacted for a virtual or in-person evaluation. Based on the evaluation, the resident may be transferred to an urgent care setting for further monitoring and testing. If a resident requires a higher level of care, or the facility cannot fully implement all recommended infection control precautions, the resident may be temporarily relocated to another facility that is better able to manage the care and precaution needs required of the resident. The state has contracted with several providers for the care of Covid-19 positive residents. State licensing and public health authorities shall be involved in finding appropriate care setting in this situation.
