

What is your plan for lifting the restrictions and reopening the community?

As states begin to roll out their phased approaches to reopening, we are aware that our long-term care communities will lag far behind the opening plans of all other sectors. As you know, our elderly residents are at the highest risk for complications and mortality from Coronavirus, and as such, we will be under heightened precautions and restrictions for quite some time to come. Further, CCL has its own criteria for lifting restrictions which must be met separate from any state and local plans which may be issued. We respect and acknowledge how hard the continued restrictions will be, but we ask that all directives as put forth by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), and state and local government continue to be adhered to fully.
